The use of any of the episodes from the series in the classroom opens up several useful possibilities. They are so well presented that they are easily understood by students. This, in turn, means that episodes can actually be used as an introduction to a topic or a unit. On the other hand, they are also excellent reinforcements, so some teachers will want to show the episodes after the end of a chapter or unit to use as a review or recap. I kept this versatility of the episode in mind when making these materials. This didactic resource contains a spreadsheet and a test about the episode it covers. These two components are based on different approaches to the video: “The student’s visualization worksheet has 50 multiple-choice questions, all presented in video order. These questions are quite detailed. Certainly, many students will have enough memory to complete the worksheet after the episode has been shown, but due to the detailed nature of the questions, some teachers may want to use the worksheet as a “during viewing” activity that will help students track information and keep up the task. information and see larger patterns covering different sections of it. My intention in writing the test was to focus only on the “big problems” that arise from the time period of American history. The students who paid attention to the video must definitely have mastered these basic and fundamental issues of the target time period. All test questions are also multiple choice. Two answer keys are provided for all questions. The One is designed for fast sorting. The other provides the full question-and-answer context to help teachers review the material aloud or facilitate classroom discussions about the material. INSTRUCTION POSSIBILITIES Why worksheet and test take these approaches, teachers can also use them to differentiate the instruction. keywords: Interstate Highway System, Baby Boom, Postwar Boom, Suburbs, Levittown, Cold War, Space Race, Moon Landing, Apollo 11, Cuba Missile Crisis, Martin Luther King, Civil Jr., Rights Movement, March on WashingtonTes paid licenseHow can I reuse this?Select the general classification (no classification) Your classification is needed to reflect your happiness.Write a reviewUpdate existing review Good to leave some feedback.Something went wrong, try again later.This feature has not yet been reviewedTo ensure quality for our reviews, only customers who have purchased this feature can review itReport of this feature to let us know if it violates our terms and conditions. This video and key answer sheet is based on the History Channel documentary series “America The Story of Us – Episode 11: Superpower.” You will receive a zip file that contains a video answer sheet (in both PDF and DOCX formats editable) and a video answer sheet key (in both PDF and DOCX formats editable). Video response sheets will turn your story lesson into a rich educational experience that keeps students attentive, engaged and responsible. Questions are designed to occur at a regular pace to keep students engaged but not overwhelmed. They are also designed so that a completed worksheet review gives students a basic overview of the video. This episode lasts about 45 minutes. * Producer: SERIES DESCRIPTION: America The Story of Us (A Hist) Ours) is an epic television event that tells the extraordinary story of how America was invented.
